February 21, 2018

Christian Record Services welcomes Patricia J. Maxwell Robertson as communication director. Christian Record Services for the Blind provides free reading services and summer and winter camp experiences for people who are blind. Generous donors allow CRS to serve over 20,000 people, sharing Christ's love with the visually impaired. Robertson is "honored to continue this tradition of service excellence and join the team at Christian Record." READ MORE

Balancing rights is often tricky. Religious freedom and LGBT rights should be taken seriously, however, the consciences and free speech of small business owners such as bakers, florists, and photographers should be respected and generally protected from being forced into supporting ceremonies that they cannot morally support. ## VIEWPOINTS

A Reputation for Restoration

“Wouldn't it be awesome when a Seventh-day Adventist Church is being planted in a community that the reputation of restoration of the Adventist church is so strong that people get excited? That they start showing up at the public hearings ... entire communities and neighborhoods come out to say, 'Yes we want this church here because we've heard about what they did in the other neighborhood and that's what we want for our neighborhood, and our children, and our generation. ...'

"I believe God has called the church to build a quality of reputation, restore the communities we are a part of, and replicate it all over the world."

— David Franklin, pastor of the Miracle City Church in Baltimore, on Feb. 21, 2018, during the final session of the 2018 e-huddle held at the NAD headquarters in Columbia, Md.
